Hermione stared into the darkness, waiting for her heart to slow and the last memories of her nightmare to fade. Her hands were sweaty and trembling slightly. She easily spun her engagement band around her finger thoughtfully and sighed.

When Severus had proposed, she'd felt more joy than she'd even thought physically possible. She loved him fully and wanted nothing more than to commit the rest of her life to making him happy.

But, giving herself to him fully was proving very difficult. Something dark from her past was holding her back. She sighed sadly. It was all Ron's fault...
