

Five Days at Disney's Really Magical Kingdom Resort

by WriterMerrin

You are cordially invited to the destination wedding of the year. Five days, five couples, five magical suites.

Winner of a Golden Quill for memorable drabble series at Romancing the Wizard.

Chapter One: Luna and Colin

From the Goldilocks Suite

Chapter 1 of 5

You are cordially invited to the destination wedding of the year. Five days, five couples, five magical suites.

Winner of a Golden Quill for memorable drabble series at Romancing the Wizard.

Chapter One: Luna and Colin

From the Goldilocks Suite

"Here's ours." Luna waved a tiny wand-shaped key over a blonde caricature, unlocking the door.

"She looks like you."

"Maybe that's why they snickered." Luna assessed the suite she and Colin would be sharing as they covered the destination wedding of the year at Disney's wizarding resort: three bedrooms, a bathroom, and a balcony.

Colin followed her into the first one. It was pink, and Luna declared the bed "too soft."

Colin had a sudden sinking feeling. "Are you familiar with the story of Goldilocks?"

"No, it must be strictly Muggle. Why?"

"I think I know why they were snickering."

From the Jasmine Suite

Chapter 2 of 5

Chapter two: Draco and Pansy

From the Jasmine Suite

Blindfolded, all Pansy knew was the compression of the Portkey, then release.

"Where are we? If you don't return my wand now, you'll regret it, whoever you are!"

"Your mother gave me your wand."

That voice! "Draco! Why?"

Taking advantage of her stunned stillness, he drew her gently to himself. "You wouldn't return my owls or acknowledge me in public."

She began to struggle daintily. "I thought you were engaged."

"I thought you knew better than to listen to my mother."

"And so you dragged me all the way to—"

"America."

"For this elaborate seduction?"

"Did it work?"

"Oh, yes."

prompt: seduction

From the Alice Suite

Chapter 3 of 5

Chapter three: Remus and Tonks

After assuring Tonks once again that her mother was more than capable of caring for a Metamorphmagic child, Remus was looking forward to trying out some of the more adventurous amusements on offer. When it was their turn for five minutes on the broom obstacle course, the wizard gave them a choice of racing two brooms or sharing one.

The competitive look in his wife's eyes was almost enough for him to challenge her to race, but the feel of her arms around him and her thighs clutching his told him that he'd made the right decision.

Until next time.

prompt: riding

From the Merlin Suite

Chapter 4 of 5

Chapter four: Arthur and Molly

From the Merlin Suite

Arthur slowly backed out of the room where his wife was melting down.

Approaching the sitting room mirror, he tapped it with his wand. "The Belle Suite, please."

"Just one moment," a voice replied.

Several moments later, Snape's voice echoed through the room. "What, Weasley?"

One unproductive conversation later, Arthur decided to walk down to the gift shop himself.

Returning with a small bottle of Calming Draught, he asked the rest of the family to excuse them, then lead Molly to a loveseat.

"Here, Mollywobbles."

Taking the draught, she looked up at him and smiled. "The wedding will be beautiful."

prompt: Calming Draught

From the Arthur Suite

Chapter 5 of 5

Chapter five: Harry and Ginny

From the Arthur Suite

After spending three nights in the Seven Dwarves Suite with various Weasleys and other former Order members, waking up with Ginny Potter was too many delights to comprehend.

When they breakfasted together on their private patio, a weather shield keeping the warm rain out, he keenly studied each movement: the way she poured her tea, spread her marmalade. This witch he'd known for almost half of his life was someone he was discovering for the first time.

Before he let her untie his bathrobe again, he kissed her until they gasped for breath. This was where happily ever after began.

Prompt: marmalade

Thanks to Hubby for the ideas, to Gelsey for beta reading, and to the gals at Romancing the Wizard for their hard work.