Chapter 1 of 1

Hermione catches Sirius in the act.

Rubbing the sleep away from her eyes, she padded down the stairs to the kitchen; she thought that Sirius had to be there because that's where he went when he couldn't sleep.

"Sirius," she yawned as she pushed the door open. "Are you--oh!" Hermione ogled at the sight of her husband sitting by himself at the table, in candlelight, devouring an entire cheesecake with a bottle of wine next to him. Her mouth opened and closed several times; Hermione imaged she probably resembled a fish. Shaking herself, she cleared her throat to get Sirius' attention.

The older man gaped at her, fork in mid-air. His dark eyes darted from the piece of cheesecake on his fork to his pj-clad wife for several moments. Finally, grinning like a fool, he gestured his fork toward her. "Cheesecake?"
