Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head

Chapter 1 of 1

A moment in the rain between Hermione and Draco.

HP is not mine.

As her hand reached for the doorknob of her house, the sky split and rain began to pour down on the unsuspecting couple who were coming to the close of their first official date. She laughed and moved out from under the awning that was above her doorstep to stand in the rain and twirl in a circle, her blue skirt rising up and twirling with her. He simply watched her, her curls catching raindrops, a giant smile on her face and her chocolate eyes dancing right along with her.

"Granger!" he called as he walked over to her, taking her hand.

"Yes, Malfoy?" She laughed, thoroughly enjoying the rain.

"Hold still so I can kiss you," he said with a big grin on his face. He reached up, cupped her face, and looked at her for a moment before gently leaning in and pressing his lips to hers with a tenderness and sweetness that spoke of his true feelings for this witch standing in front of him. Neither noticed that it was still raining until a boom of thunder sounded in the distance. She looked up at him and smiled.

"I always wanted to get kissed in the rain."
