Summer, Hermione, and a Hogwarts letter...

This was inspired by Harmony_Bites' wish for a Hermione-centric drabble about a Hogwarts letter.

Reviews are truly appreciated.

Hermione, catching up on some pleasure reading, is lazily swinging her left leg to the gentle rhythm of summer.

In her lack of concentration (her leg bumps the bed spread), she sees the Hogwarts owl.

She opens the window, and sweet-smelling wind gently moves some strands of hair sticking to her face.

Hermione has nothing to give the owl and gives the bird a sheepish shrug. As she reads, her heart flutters.

Hogwarts letters make her heart flutter. Each letter is a reminder that the past year is easily outlandish in the haze of summer is not a dream at all.
