"Potter," Draco called, his hands shoved into the pockets of his black trousers.

Harry turned around, his eyebrows raising in surprise at the blond. "Draco."

"Hello." Draco's eyes were on the ground. "I, er... Po – Harry, I owe you a debt. You saved my life, and I can't forget that. I came to ask what I can do to repay that to you."

Harry blinked, taken aback. He had never really expected Draco to ask this sort of question. It wasn't like he had saved the Slytherin's life expecting to be paid back, after all. Something about the air of humility about the blond caught Harry off guard. If someone had told him a couple of years ago that Draco Malfoy was capable of being humble, he would have laughed in their faces.

"I suppose I hadn't thought about it. You don't have to pay me back," Harry said.

"I feel that I need to, Harry." Draco shifted, his gray eyes finally meeting Harry's for a moment. As if it were easy to even acknowledge he owed Harry this debt, he now had to insist on paying it...

Harry bit his lip as he gazed into the distance for several minutes.

"Malfoy, there's only thing I could use your help with. But if you tell another soul, I will be forced to kill you myself," Harry said eventually.

Draco raised one eyebrow, but nodded slowly. "All right..."

Harry began chewing on his lip again. "I need to learn how to dance."
