Chapter 1 of 1

Draco walks in on Severus making love.

The last vestiges of daylight were fading away as Draco hurriedly crossed the manicured lawn of Hogwarts. This time of the day had always been his favourite, and normally he would have taken his time to enjoy it, but he was on a mission. He needed to speak with his godfather this evening regarding urgent business.

He swiftly made his way to Severus' chambers in the dungeons, and once he arrived, he heard soft keening noises issuing from the partially opened door. Feeling a little curious, he silently crept inside the room to an unexpected scene: Severus was making love to some beautiful witch by the fire.

He stood frozen in the shadows. He could only watch the scene unfold before his eyes. Severus' lean body was straddled over the woman, and as he was stroking into her, he bent to kiss her pouty, red lips. Judging by the look in his eyes, this was no dalliance with a random witch; he loved her.

Draco continued to watch them sail on passion's plane and then slowly make the descent. Once their bodies cooled, Severus pushed an errant, chestnut-coloured curl away from the girl's face and placed a tender kiss on her lips. As she briefly turned, Draco caught enough of a glimpse to recognise her: it was none other than Hermione Granger. His godfather was in love with the bane of his existence.
