Chapter 1 of 1

Luna finally gets tired of her shoes going missing.

Luna's sneakers had been stolen one too many times this winter, and now she was upset. Although the castle was heated, the corridors were still drafty and her feet would freeze without something to cover them.

Deciding that something needed to be done, she walked through the castle to find her Head of House. After a few minutes, she found him speaking with the Potions master at the entrance to the Great Hall.

'Professors, excuse me a moment.' Luna looked at her socked feet as she waited for the two to finish their conversation.

'Is there something I can help you with, Miss Lovegood,' the diminutive Charms professor squeaked at her.

'Yes, there is, Professor. You see, my sneakers keep getting stolen, and as it is winter, I need them.'

'Oh, dear,' he said with a concerned look upon his face. 'I may have just the idea to keep them from disappearing on you.'

'Really?'

'Yes. I need two things from you, Miss Lovegood: your shoes and your silence. May I have both?'

Luna summoned her sneakers from their current position on the rafters and then handed them over to him.

'Why do you need my silence, Professor?' Luna asked curiously as she cocked her eyebrow at him.

'Because what I'm going to do could cause a spot of bother for me with the Headmistress.'

The tiny professor lightly tapped her sneakers with the tip of his wand and handed them back to her with an evil grin.

'What exactly did you do to them, Professor?'

'Well, I placed a tracking spell on them, and the people who are responsible for your torment will have to walk around for a couple of days covered in feathers. I daresay that should solve your problem nicely.'

A/N: Thanks to sunny33 for the following prompt: It's the middle of winter. Luna Lovegood is finally tired of having her shoes snaffled. She goes to her Head of House for help. What does he do?

Also, I must credit SW69 for the use of feathers.
