

Happy Birthday, J.S. Bach

by lyn_f

Lucius walks into a candlelit room and notices a harpsichord and a viola da gamba.
What musical surprise awaits him?

~

Chapter 1 of 1

Lucius walks into a candlelit room and notices a harpsichord and a viola da gamba. What musical surprise awaits him?

I don't own them. It's all JK Rowling's. I'm just borrowing them for the moment.

Lucius smiled as he entered the candlelit room. He noticed a man sitting behind a harpsichord, whispering to a woman holding a viola da gamba. They both glanced at Lucius and smiled at him. Lucius nodded his head in response.

They started their duet. Lucius closed his eyes, relaxed into his chair, and allowed the wonderful sounds to wash over him. As the second movement began, he realised he had heard it before. A moment later, he identified it as the Sonata in g minor, BWV 1029. How perfect, Lucius thought, and a completely fitting way to celebrate Bach's birthday.

A/N: Three-word prompt issued by luvsev: candles, Lucius, and violin music. Without the disclaimer and A/N, this story contains exactly 100 words according to Microsoft Word. Thanks to ladyinthecloak for the Saturday evening beta-reading.