Chapter 1 of 1

Severus, Hermione, and Lucius under a waterfall.

The moon brightly shone on the shimmering water below the cliffs and illuminated a woman's naked form. She was standing underneath the waterfall, immersed to her waist in chilly water. Two men joined her: one the very embodiment of night, and the other, the father of her childhood enemy.

The blond edged closer to her and wrapped his strong arm around her slender waist, pulling her back into his embrace. He whispered words of passionate promises which tickled her ear and sent arousal racing through her veins.

She moaned softly as he brushed her drenched curls away from her neck and pressed his lips to a sensitive spot, licking the curve lightly. She shivered as she felt another—her dark-haired lover—place tiny kisses in the delicate hollow of her neck and trail his calloused hands across her pebbled nipples and down her stomach.

Teasing caresses passed over the juncture of her thighs and hips as another pair of strong hands stroked and kneaded her buttocks. Suddenly, she was lifted out of the water and carried to a massive, smooth rock and laid upon its cool surface.

Her eyes drifted shut as one man suckled her breasts and the other sank his length deeply into her, setting up a tantalisingly slow pace.

Passion built as the two men brought her closer to the edge of reason. One, two, three thrusts and she shattered, calling out the names of her two lovers.

'Lucius! Severus! Yes!'
