

Extra! Extra!

by debjunk

A snippet of today's Daily Prophet. Just how did Draco react to that movie?

Oneshot

Chapter 1 of 1

A snippet of today's Daily Prophet. Just how did Draco react to that movie?

This is a sequel to last week's drabble: The Future Revealed.

Mayhem in Muggle-land

by Rita Skeeter

Obliviators were called to a Muggle cinema last night when it was attacked by one of our very own.

Draco Malfoy, playboy and heir to the staggering Malfoy fortune, was reported to have hexed a 'moovee' screen during a showing of the Muggle movie Jurassic Park. A 'moovee', for those of you who are unfamiliar with Muggle technology, is a story using moving pictures. It resembles our own photos, but the movement lasts much longer. Sometimes up to two hours.

This 'moovee' is a story about the ancient dinosaurs reportedly returning to our time. According to witnesses, Mr. Malfoy became agitated when a giant Tyrannosoreus Rex seemed to charge towards the audience.

"Pansy Parkinson ducked her head into Draco Malfoy's arm in fear," claimed a witness who asked to remain anonymous. Her name is Sybill Trelawney. "My eye should have warned me that there was trouble afoot," she was heard to mutter as she wandered away from the scene.

Blaise Zabini, Mr. Malfoy's friend, was seated on Miss Parkinson's other side. "Draco leaped to his feet and turned to Pansy. He said something like 'Son of a bowtruckle! What were those blasted Muggles thinking? Pansy, I'll save you!' Then, before I could say or do anything, he'd pointed his wand straight at the movie screen. He must have used non-verbal spells, because the screen suddenly ripped in half and explosions filled the air."

Within minutes, small fires had erupted within the cinema, and Muggles were seen running from the theater, screaming with their hands in the air. Obliviators had their hands full trying to find all the Muggles who'd escaped in order to erase their memories. It took over an hour to locate all of the Muggles who had fled, as some of them had reached their automobeeds and had left the scene. Luckily, our faithful Obliviators are very adept at tracking spells and soon had every Muggle accounted for.

Draco Malfoy was taken in for questioning once the fires had been controlled, and the cinema returned to its original state. By this time, your faithful reporter had reached the location and was privy to the following scene...

Draco Malfoy was being dragged by two Aurors, struggling all the way. He demanded loudly—and obnoxiously—that he be released, stating, "How was I to know the thing wasn't really coming at me?"

The Aurors subdued Mr. Malfoy with a Silencing spell and quickly Apparated away with him. He was charged with one count of breaching the International Statute of Secrecy, one count of inciting Muggles to riot, and one count of stupidity.

His father, Lucius Malfoy, posted bail, but refused to comment, as he was severely embarrassed by the whole situation. His wife, Narcissa stated that they were very disappointed that their son had disgraced himself by being seen at a Muggle cinema.

---

A/N: Here's the prompt from BrenaMarie: My husband basically said. "Why don't you suggest someone write a Daily Prophet article as Rita Skeeter..."

So lets just say something crazy or some juicy gossip has happened in the wizarding world and you just need to tell your loyal readers all about it.