All I need

Chapter 1 of 1

I am not a substitute

He heard a small sound as the door to his bedroom slowly opened. A shadow slipped through without any sound into the room. It avoided the bar of moonlight shining through the window, keeping to the deep shadows.

A swish of silk on skin as the nightdress came off, and she slipped under the sheet next to him.

"I cannot be her."

"I so very much do not want you to be," Snape said.

"Do you really mean that?"

"Look inside me and you will know."

"I do not want to do that with you—ever".

"I see only you when I look at you."

She sighed, but this time because he had wrapped his arms around her. His lips came down on hers until he found them trembling as they opened, her tongue twining with his. And then everything was all right, all hurt forgotten, their bodies melting into each other as if they had been made for one another.

AN: Thanks to ladyinthecloak for inspiring me as usual.
