Chapter 1 of 1

Luna asks Ginny a question, and the answer may change their friendship forever.

"Have you ever kissed a boy?"

Ginny looked up, surprised. The question was completely random, especially since neither of them had spoken a word since Luna and she had sat down in the library and began their homework.

"Did a Wrackspurt infest your brain, Ginny?" Luna questioned gently. "Here, let me--"

"No!" Ginny shouted without thinking. She clapped her hands over her mouth and glanced around in alarm. "I'm fine. You just... took me by surprise."

"Did I?"

Ginny rolled her eyes. "You asked a question?"

"Yes." Luna put her quill down and rested her chin on her folded hands. "Have you ever kissed a boy?"

"Yeah..."

"Is it like kissing a girl?"

Ginny almost fell out of her chair. "Wha--What?"

"A girl."

"Luna, I've never kissed a girl." Ginny felt a blush crawling up her cheeks.

Luna sighed disappointingly. "That's rather strange."

"Not being a lesbian is rather strange?"

"It's rather narrow-minded of you to assume that I'm a lesbian."

"Sorry," Ginny mumbled. "So you're...?"

"I suppose labels would call it bisexual."

"You've kissed a girl?"

Luna nodded. "I wish it had been you."

Ginny tensed, her blush deepening as Luna's hand slid under the table and began caressing her bare thigh.

"I could kiss you now."

She nodded, closing her eyes. The seconds seemed to tick by slowly as she waited to feel Luna's lips on hers.

"Ginny," Luna commanded, "look at me."

Releasing the breath she didn't realize she had been holding, Ginny cracked an eye open, only to widen them in shock. Luna looked delicious. Her flushed skin, sparkling eyes, and full lips made her look sultry. Luna ghosted Ginny's lips before crushing against them. It took Ginny entirely by surprise. She moaned into the kiss as she exploded, soaking her knickers.

"Wow..." Ginny managed to gasp.

"I know," Luna whispered into her ear. "Much better than kissing a boy, right?"
