An alternate universe isn't necessarily a good thing.

Thanks to Melusin for the beta.

I make no money out of this.

Severus pinched himself but no, nothing had changed. In fact, everything had changed, but in the end, it changed nothing for him.

"I need a spy at Hogwarts," said the Dark Lord through his long white beard.

"Yes, Master," answered Severus.

It was weird to call him 'Master', the old, blue-eyed wizard.

Later he found it equally weird to be interviewed for a teaching job by a bald, red-eyed headmaster.

Even if Severus had sometimes imagined a world in which the Dark Lord and Dumbledore had traded places, he wasn't prepared for this at all; he could see no difference.
