Teacher and Student

Chapter 1 of 1

A response to the GrangerSnape100 challenge "Stains".

"Make sure you cut them with the grain, not against it," Snape muttered as he adjusted the flame, "I don't want another stain on the table."

The girl nodded and turned the roots.

"Now... tell me why you have to use a copper knife for Potentilla and not a silver one?" he asked, looking over to her.

She had to think a moment for the right answer, chewing her bottom lip. Snape couldn't suppress a soft chuckle – she was so much like her mother.

Hermione, watching them from the door, felt her heart warm at the sight. Teacher for life.

A/N: Sorry for the lip-chewing ;)
