How Do You Feed a Magical Bunny?

Chapter 1 of 1

Luna finds a magical creature and takes it to Hagrid.

"Hagrid, Hagrid, you have to help me!" Luna cried out as she ran up to Hagrid's cottage.

"What is it, Luna?"

"I found this creature under my bed, and I'm sure it is magical! What should I feed it?"

"Luna, you know that is a bunny, right?"

"Well, of course it is a bunny, but it is a magical bunny; I'm sure of it!"

"Why?" Hagrid was almost afraid to ask. He was quite fond of Luna, but sometimes, she was a bit too much, even for him.

"Because yesterday all there was under my bed was dust. Today there was a bunny. It must be magical!"

"You have a point there, Luna, but I have no idea what to feed a magical dust bunny. Carrots?"

"It didn't like those, I tried."

Luna and Hagrid spent the day trying futilely to get the dust bunny to eat.

Fortunately Hermione came by that afternoon. All of a sudden, the bunny darted into her bag. It grabbed a romance novel and a set of Arithmancy problems, shuffled them together and started eating.

"Oh, that explains it!" exclaimed Luna.

"That explains what?" asked Hermione.

"I thought it was a dust bunny. It's not. It's a plot bunny!"

Luna picked up the now sated bunny, thanked Hagrid and wandered off, asking her new pet what it thought of combining Shakespeare, Anne Rice and Runes.

A/N: Thank you to slytherinlaurel for the quick beta. I appreciate it!

A/N2: I didn't quite answer the prompt, because Luna keeps the bunny, but I couldn't help myself.

Prompt: Luna finds a bunny and thinks it's another magical creature. She brings it to Hagrid as a gift. Does he tell her what the animal truly is, or does he go along with her?
