Not mine, no money made. Thanks to Janus for beta-reading.

Ron couldn't believe he was out shopping at 3 am AGAIN! And for chili peppers and butter pecan ice cream, of all things. Now, Ron would eat just about anything, but that combination simply turned his stomach.

"Ron!" a familiar voice called.

Ron turned to see Harry striding toward him, a nearly full shopping cart wheeled in front of him.

"Pregnancy craving shopping?" Harry asked.

"Pregnancy craving shopping." Ron looked into the cart and grimaced. "Bloody hell, Harry. What does my sister have you shopping for?"

Harry rolled his eyes. "All she wants is pickles and potato chips this week. Merlin only knows what she'll want next week."

"I'm lucky. I just need to get some chili peppers and ice cream," Ron said as his phone rang. He answered it and listened for a moment or two before hanging up. "And olives. Lots of olives."

Harry and Ron continued their shopping, laughing and complaining all the way.
