Chapter 1 of 3

Memos from Hogwarts denizens to and from Durmstrang denizens.

To: Ronald Weasley, ne'er-do-well

From: Viktor Krum, Quidditch Champion, Auror, Triwizard Tournament participant, Durmstrang graduate, and Hermione's husband and father of five.

Weasley, I know you still harbour feelings for my wife. You have got to get a life, mate. This is getting pathetic.

Grow up; she is not going to leave me for you, now or ever. She was your friend, not your girlfriend.

Seriously, for the past twelve years you have sent her cards and flowers on holidays and her birthday, but she throws them away.

I hear Lavender Brown is still enamoured of you. Give her a go, why don't you?

Sick of having this conversation with you.

Viktor

Intramural Quidditch League

RE: Intramural Quidditch League and Word Games

Dear Viktor,

The idea of an intramural Quidditch League has quite a lot of merit.

Perhaps it is something you and your wife should SEEK an answer to after you finish CHASING each other around the house.

The ensuing debate, which she will surely BEAT you at, will have you wondering why you thought she was a KEEPER.

Seriously, it is a wonderful idea and well worth considering. I used all the player positions in a memo.

Now let's see if you can do the same thing.

Krum's Answer

Chapter 3 of 3

Memos from Hogwarts denizens to and from Durmstrang denizens.

Memo:

To: Rolanda Hooch, Quidditch Teacher, Hogwarts School

From: Viktor Krum, Quidditch Teacher, Durmstrang Academy

Rolanda,

It was actually Hermione's idea to form the Intramural league.

We have contacted Beauxbatons and the American schools, also.

Your little play on words intrigued my wife. She said to tell you that I am playing Seeker, Chaser and Keeper now with the Krum team.

I have beaten my record for catching things. I have to seek time alone with her, and chase the children because she has her head in a book all the time.

And lastly, I will keep her and the children safe and happy now that our world is peaceful again.

I have answered your challenge. Best wishes to you.

Viktor Krum.
