I Told You To Kill The Spare

Chapter 1 of 1

Find out why Wormtail is not allowed to attend Lord Voldemort's Resurrection Party.

'But, my Lord, please,' Wormtail whimpered. 'I am your most loyal, your most devoted ...'

'I said no, Wormtail. And when I say no, I mean no.'

'My Lord,' Wormtail pleaded, 'Just five minutes, please. Just a sip of champagne.'

'No!' Voldemort's voice echoed from the walls of the Malfoy drawing room. 'I will check on you in an hour. If your spell is satisfactory by then, I might allow you to join the celebrations.' He gave Wormtail a disgusted look. 'However, I very much doubt that you will succeed.'

'But, my Lord, I do not understand. The boy fell to the ground, he lay spread-eagled. He was dead!'

'And that, dear Wormtail, is where you are wrong. Your Killing Curse did not kill the boy. It ...' Once more, Voldemort looked thoroughly disgusted. 'See for yourself.'

Voldemort flicked his wand, and out of thin air appeared a rectangular Muggle device of which Wormtail knew that it was called ævilision or something of that kind.

A second flick of Voldemort's wand made the device come alive, and figures appeared, walking and talking.

And that was when Wormtail understood why he was not allowed to attend the Dark Lord's Resurrection Party. His Killing Curse had failed to kill Cedric Diggory. Instead, it had turned him into a sparkling vampire.

Dedicated to the sweet girls in my English class. They love their Cedric. Or was it the sparkling vampire they love? I always get confused.
