He had been blindfolded.

His wrists had been bound tightly.

His hair had been tied up, revealing the pale nape of his neck.

He had been divested of his frock coat, and his white shirt had been cut open.

But he could feel her merciful presence, he could feel her approaching, and nothing else mattered. Soon she would keep her promise and end his torments.

And then his body tensed as he heard the soft voice behind him: "Now be brave, my love."

He shivered as the first caress of the silky feather trailed down his spine.

Condemned to pleasure.

"Please, Jo."

Severus Snape had been cornered at last by an irate Harry Potter. A powerful Expelliarmus had sent his wand over the battlements, and he could feel behind his back the cold, rough stones of the Astronomy Tower.

"Please, Jo. Let him do it. Albus still owes me the punchline about the Hag, the Healer and the Mimbulus Mimbletonia."

The author smirked.

Light footsteps were heard hurrying up the stairs, and a second later, Hermione Granger burst through the door and grasped firmly Harry's arm, forcing him to lower his wand.

Severus Snape sighed.

Condemned to live.
