

Lessons in the Library

by luvsev

Lucius gives Hermione a lesson in the library.

Lessons in the Library

Chapter 1 of 1

Lucius gives Hermione a lesson in the library.

Merrily dancing flames illuminate numerous rows of leather-bound books and other curling, golden-brown manuscripts on shelves extending to the ceiling. In the shadows, a curly-haired woman struggles -- intricate knots bind her wrists to a wooden ladder leaning against the stacks -- as a man, whose hair is silken and pale as milky moonlight, teases her naked body with feather-light touches.

She gasps when his hand lingers where she desires most. 'Let me come. Please.'

He grins, toying with her further, fingers seeking entrance, wringing moans from her lips.

'Lucius...'

'Not yet, Hermione. Your lesson isn't over.'

A/N: Many thanks to my incredible beta, kittylefish. This drabble was written in response to Aleysiasnape's prompt on HPCon_Envy: LM/HG, NC-17, and Malfoy Library.