Chapter 1 of 1

Molly enjoys a night of fundraising Bingo

She couldn't believe she had agreed to do this, but here she was sitting at a table with a bunch of numbered cards spread in front of her. As she listened to the numbers being called, she would work on her knitting and stop to cover one she might have on her cards before quickly returning to her project.

It had been a wonderful evening so far with many good prizes won throughout the event by various players. Some were rather interesting pairings of prizes to winners on the previous games. Everyone did get a giggle when Lucius Malfoy won a gift card to Weasleys' Wizarding Whizzes. The gift card for four free visits to Stylish Locks Magical Beauty Salon being won by Bellatrix was even more humorous as was the year's supply of shampoo that was the prize for one Severus Snape. What made it all worthwhile was the fact that the proceeds of the event were to rebuild Hogwarts, and even better was the fact that now that all was over, there were no opposing sides when it came to that fact. Supporting the school seemed to be a very unifying goal.

This was the last game of the evening, and the winner would receive the grand prize which was a king-size crocheted bedspread that she herself had made and donated. This was the reason that while Molly had continued playing along, she had not bothered to call out the bingo that had been marked several minutes ago. Needless to say, when the shout came, Molly smiled.

Molly smiled until she realized the voice of the winner was very familiar. It should be. After all, Molly was married to Arthur Weasley, now the proud owner of the bingo grand prize.
