

I Spy Something...

by Cersia

Severus spies on Hermione. A Headmaster Snape/Professor Granger universe.

I Spy Something...

Chapter 1 of 1

Severus spies on Hermione. A Headmaster Snape/Professor Granger universe.

Severus watched with mild interest as Professor Granger disappeared down a darkened corridor. He wasn't sure what the woman was up to, but since they had initiated relations a week ago, he was curious to find out. Severus found himself quietly opening and closing doors along the corridor until he reached the last one. It was nothing more than a janitor's closet, but it was roomy enough to conduct a secret liaison. Severus pressed his ear against the door only to hear the muffled cries of Hermione.

With great theatrical finesse, Severus tore open the door and discovered that she had been cheating on him with... "Chocolate?" She was hiding away so she could eat chocolate?

**

Hermione turned her chocolate-stained face towards him. The only thing Hermione had betrayed was her diet; it that Madam Pomfrey had put them all on it seemed. "I couldn't help it, Severus," she explained pitifully. "I had to have some. It's been nearly a month since I had last had any."

"You do realize you'll have to work all those calories off," he said to her, wiping the chocolate from her cheek. He then found himself tasting his fingers. It was chocolate all right, with a hint of Hermione. Delicious. Delectable and all those other words that could describe both a woman and chocolate.

**

"Yes, I know. I'll walk, I'll swim, I'll even ride a broom if it means that you don't tell Madam Pomfrey," she begged, breaking off another block of a chocolate from a chocolate bar she was eating. The woman was insufferable as ever.

With a sly grin Severus said silkily: "I know of another way you could work that off." She didn't get a chance to reply as Severus stepped into the closet and closed the door behind him.