'Hello, my name is Rita Skeeter, and welcome to Muggle Masterchef. After last week's interesting episode, we are proud to welcome Jamie Oliver, who is going to cook us his own healthy version of Pumpkin Pasties.'

'Right, so your ordinary pasties are chock-full of fat and sugar, right? So we're just gonna chuck in some wholemeal flour and replace the butter with vegetable oil. Brilliant!'

'Erm... sounds delicious, Jamie. Now, I understand you've recently been on a mission to change the menu at Hogwarts School?'

'Yeah, we had a bit of bother getting in. The governors tried to close the project down... a Mr Lucius Malfoy...?'

'Yes, well, we've got a typical day's school food here, which we'd like your ideas on, Jamie.'

'Yeah, so... fried breakfast. Every day. Just grill it, yeah? I've met the house-elves; they're great, right? But we need to educate these guys... So, we've rolled out our wholemeal pastry, but you don't want all that dodgy, horrible refined sugar in the filling. Pumpkin's naturally sweet, so just pimp it up with some dates if you want it sweeter. Just literally chop 'em up and chuck 'em in. Beautiful!'

'Very nice, Jamie. So here we have a Hogwarts lunch.'

'Sandwiches – pukka, but why not use beautiful granary bread? And does anyone know what that meat actually is? Stroat – you gotta be kidding me!'

'Oh, I'm sure they're not on the approved menu. I'm sure they're – how shall I put it? – a GIANT mistake.'

'OK, but the worst thing was the sweets these kids buy at... where was it? Honeydukes? I mean, Pepper Imps that make you breathe fire; you're gonna give that to an eleven year old? That's, like, totally irresponsible! And Bertie Bott's Every-Flavour Beans... the kids've been telling me you can get, like, bogey and earwax flavours. Now, normally the words 'all natural ingredients' is music to my ears, but...'

'Well, of course, the monthly visits to our sponsor, Honeydukes, are the highlight of the term for the students...'

'You don't have kids, do you, Reet?'

'Well, um, no, my career is my baby.'

'Well, I've got four, and lemme tell you, you do NOT want your kids eating this stuff. A single sugar quill has twice the recommended daily amount of sugar for a kid.'

'Well, you see, Jamie, Honeydukes is the network's biggest sponsor, so... Er, excuse me, I'm just getting a message through my earpiece... I'm afraid this series has been cancelled with immediate effect. So, thank you very much, Jamie, but that's all we have time for.'

'No, but wait! Hey, this is really important for our kids...'
