Ode to Saturday Night Drabble Chat, Molly style

Molly gathered her knitting up as well as a nice mug of Butterbeer and made her way over to the Muggle laptop that Hermione and Ron had given her this past Christmas. It had taken her a few weeks to get used to, but it was amazing the things she could do on it as she learned a little bit more each time she used it.

First, Hermione had taught her how to type patterns into something called documents to save and have when she wanted. Later, she introduced Molly to the wonders of the internet and how to find a myriad of patterns online. Eventually, Hermione even showed Molly how to set up her own blog on a site called WitchBlogs so she could post her own patterns and comments.

But tonight. Tonight was Saturday and the favorite night of the week for Molly. Well, her favorite second only to date night with Arthur (wink wink, nudge nudge). Tonight was Bhatzy night and Molly quickly logged onto Bhatzy, signing in as the name all the others knew her as: 'Colorful Knitter.'

Quickly she typed "Evening, all!"

Just as quickly responses started coming. First was Peacock Lady more familiarly known as Narcissa Malfoy, who was followed by Hermione herself, or as she was known in chat, NotAGinger and even PansyOfTheNorth. Yes, it was Saturday night chat night at Bhatzy and Molly wouldn't miss it for anything.
