Chapter 1 of 1

Voldemort is bored and he tries something new.

Disclaimer: I don't own anything. I'm just borrowing it for a bit.

Voldemort was bored. Sure, he could go out and torture a few Mudbloods. He could go kill some Muggles. That was always fun. But it got old. After all, you see one dead Muggle, you've seen them all. And the screaming of tortured Mudbloods tended to be hard on the ears. He already was starting to go deaf from all the pleas and screams of mercy he'd had to endure over the years.

Ho hum, he thought. He absentmindedly looked down at his Dark Mark. Maybe there was something he could do to liven things up a bit. He took out his wand and then consulted his copy of Magical Tattoos: Everything You Needed to Know About Them. No one else knew that was how he had learned to make the Dark Mark, and there was no way in Hell he would tell anyone. He turned to the chapter on adding music to it. He wanted a song that was going to strike fear in the hearts of his followers and enemies. Rubbing his hands together and cackling madly, he started the incantation.

When the spell was finished, all he heard was:

Voldemort, Voldemort, ew Volda Volda mort Voldamort

The song played over and over again. What did I do wrong? That isn't right! he thought. He consulted his book again and smacked his forehead with his palm. Instead of the evil sounding song he had wanted, he had cast the spell for the silly one. He was never going to live this down.
