"But why, Ron?" Hermione asked with tears in her eyes. He had just told her that he was calling off the wedding, which was only a week away.

"I can't marry you. I'm madly in love with someone else," Ron said with a dreamy look in his eyes.

"Lavender Brown again, is it?" Hermione asked with her hands on her hips. "I knew that you weren't over her yet. You've been cheating on me with her, haven't you?"

"No, it's not Lavender. It's... Draco. Draco Malfoy," Ron said, a flush creeping up his face.

"Draco Malfoy? Are you mad?" Hermione's eyes were flashing in anger.

"Yes, madly in love," Ron said dreamily.

"You stay right here, Ron," Hermione said, turning and marching out of the house. She couldn't believe it, and she wouldn't believe it. Ron obviously wasn't in his right mind. It was so sudden. After years of hating Draco Malfoy, Ron all of a sudden loved him? It didn't seem right. She had to get to the bottom of it.

She had been puzzling over it for about half an hour when she suddenly realized the answer. She had to go see them.

"How could you do this?" she shouted once she entered their shop.

Fred exchanged a sly grin with George. "Guess our new product's working. Eh, clone?"

"Looks that way," George said, grinning back at him.

"You thought it was funny to make your own brother fall in love with Draco Malfoy? A week before our wedding?" Hermione asked, taking out her wand. "Have you forgotten who I am and what spells I know?" She tapped her wand against her palm menacingly.

"Oh, you're going to hex us, are you?" George asked. "We have some pretty good shield charms on our clothes. In fact, they block most everything."

"They won't block this," Hermione said, raising her wand and casting a spell that sent horror into their eyes.

A few moments later an owl flew into their shop with a red envelope - a Howler. The Howler opened and Mrs. Weasley's voice came out of it.

"FRED AND GEORGE! HOW DARE YOU HEX YOUR BROTHER TO MAKE HIM BE IN LOVE WITH DRACO MALFOY! SET HIM RIGHT NOW OR YOU WILL HAVE THE TASTE OF MY SPELLS!"

Hermione looked in satisfaction at the terrified faces of Fred and George. "And, you will be telling Ron what you did. Otherwise, I will be removing your reasons to be called wizards."

Fred and George set about right away to removing the spell. But they didn't know what was scarier – their mum, Hermione, or having Ron find out what they did. They imagined they'd find out soon.
