

Cello Song

by Fairfield

Duet for viola da gamba and witch.

Chapter 1 of 1

Duet for viola da gamba and witch.

To you my love and none other wight,
I sing my song for day dawning bright.
Only strum my strings and hold me tight,
For played by you everything's all right.
The venom cut down a hardwood heart
That died anew that we had to part.
But devotion gave a brand new start,
And now I'm a thing of vibrant art.
But play for more than you and I.
Our song will stride across the sky
To pluck new life from things that die
And stir dead loves from where they lie.
For this I know and hold most true:
The world and I exist by you.

Prompt from teaoli: Severus Snape is an inanimagus, and his alternate form is a viola da gamba
