Hermione loathed travelling by Floo; there was simply no dignified way of hurtling through fireplaces, and the subsequent arrival left a lot to be desired.

Unfortunately, this was the Order's preferred method of travel, so she dutifully stepped into the emerald green flames... and promptly landed on a very surprised Severus. 'Of all people,' she thought to herself, blushing violently, 'it had to be him'.

She assumed he'd be furious with her, but he just smiled seductively and said in his silky baritone voice, "I know I'm irresistible, but please, Miss Granger, try to refrain from throwing yourself at me!"
