The Mischievous Snapes

Harry watched Hermione and Severus talk in the corner. It was the Order's annual Christmas party and, as always, the two only had eyes for each other. They had been married for five years now.

Hermione always looked so happy around Severus. Silently, he watched as the two slipped away. Harry knew exactly where they were going and what they were going to do.

Sure enough, the couple returned about twenty minutes later. Severus appeared rather smug while Hermione's face was slightly pink. Harry was right in his suspicions and silently shook his head. The Snapes were truly something else.
