'A Credit to Their Houses' drabble

Chapter 1 of 1

The day after Christmas, Scorpius dutifully sits down with quill, ink, and parchment. Another "A Credit to Their Houses" sequel, set in our trio's First Year.

Disclaimer: I don't own the characters--or the jumper. (A shame, that... Scorpius makes it sound quite lovely.)

Dear Mrs. Weasley,

Thank you most kindly for the lovely jumper. It is so soft and warm! It is just the thing to wear with the denim trousers Cousin Teddy gave me. It must have been devilishly difficult to knit a letter 'S.' It looks just like a green snake against the gray. Al says it is 'wicked cool' and I quite agree.

I like it best because it reminds me of my best friends Rose and Albus Severus when I am away from them.

Sincerely,

Scorpius H. Malfoy

P.S. Thank you to Mr. Weasley also for the diagram explaining how to wear it. It was very thoughtful since I am not familiar with Muggle clothing.

Note: Scorpius (and possibly other, slightly less conscientious) children have more Thank-you notes to write; so this is part one of an indeterminate number of entries.
