

Falling Hard

by Battle of Lissa

There is something to be said for major age differences in relationships.

Falling Hard

Chapter 1 of 1

There is something to be said for major age differences in relationships.

Am I just a passing fancy you found,
Stray and willing along the beaten path?
Am I just a warm body in your bed,
As you stroke my back, do you laugh?
I have no control over the capacity of my experience,
Time brings the wrinkles of knowledge and acceptance.
A young age and ripe body seem alluring to begin with,
Am I just a novelty flattering your existence?
Am I a private game with a timer on my heart?
Enticing words whispered in my ear so I never stray.
Have you been deceiving me from the very start?
How easy I fell for you, heavy on my back and hips I lay.