Real, Always

Chapter 1 of 1

Hermione is not sure what is deception and what is real.

Disclaimer: The sandbox belongs to J.K. Rowling. I only play here.

Hermione felt like she was falling. She could feel the vertigo as the room seemed to tilt sideways, and she kept waiting to feel the floor rise up and smack her.

However, she would be waiting in vain for that outcome.

She heard a soft murmur, "I would never let you fall, Hermione."

Hermione looked up and she felt like she was drowning in the inky blackness of his eyes. It was just a deception though. She knew that, but she felt overwhelmed with the lust and love washing over her.
