

Temptation

by Anijade

The desire to give in is the hardest temptation to let go

Temptation

Chapter 1 of 1

The desire to give in is the hardest temptation to let go

The Darkness calls, no screams my name.

I try not to listen, not to hear its sweet promises.

Within it is oblivion, calm, peace.

I stand at the edge and try to see beyond it.

There are shadows, lies, that block my view.

I question the dark; fight its hold on me.

Then briefly there is a flicker, light or hope.

It catches my eye distracts me from the dark.

I see something beyond the dark

I sense that there might be more than what seems to be.

The calm is no longer within the dark but closer.

I close my eyes and step back once again, safe from the unknown.