

Good King Wenceslas

by lilyginny27

"Evil Lord Voldemort" sung to the tune of "Good King Wenceslas."

Evil Lord Voldemort

Chapter 1 of 1

"Evil Lord Voldemort" sung to the tune of "Good King Wenceslas."

Evil Lord Voldemort looked out
On All Hallow's evening
Where the leaves lay round about
Near the pitch so even
Brightly shone the moon that night
Though the wind was cruel
When a werewolf came in sight
To catch a child as food.
"Hither, wolf, and stand by me
If thou know'st it, telling
Yonder wizard, who is he?
Where and what his dwelling?"
"Master, he lives in Hogwarts hence
Underneath the school
Right against the Slytherin House
By the potion classroom."
"Bring me flesh and bring me blood

Bring the traitor hither.
Now I will see you on him dine
When we bear him thither."
Wolf and Lord forth they went
Forth they went together
To catch the Potion man that night
In the bitter weather.
"Master, the night is darker now
And the wind blows stronger
I need food, I need him now,
I can go no longer."
"Mark my footsteps, my good wolf
Tread thou in them bravely
Thou shalt find thy snack tonight
The Potion Master his grave."
In his master's steps he trod
Round the pitch he glided
Surprise he ate the man one bite
While the Lord had bided.
Therefore, witch and wizard, be sure
Mud or blood possessing
Ye who now will kill the wolf
Shall yourselves find blessing.

A/N: Good King Wenceslas was written in the 1850's by John Mason Neale. It was sung to the tune of a 13th century spring carol. Amazing how recycling works, isn't it?
Happy holidays!