Spine

by stuttermoan

War-weary Snape. A snake is just a backbone with a will of its own.

0

Chapter 1 of 1

War-weary Snape. A snake is just a backbone with a will of its own.

When alone, my back speaks war;

Folds itself to store, inter;

Lets its posture fall to feel

Nights who've blacked my eyes before.

In company, my back is fine:

A lie for pride, defiance, spite,

Standing on my strength again;

All that's left of me is spine.