Short video to prompt No 16

Grateful thanks to southernwitch69 and blue_paris for humoring my requests for photo manips

The music is mine. Some people have asked about it, and I'd love to send it to anyone who asks, but unfortunately, my macbook, on which I have the original file stored, has died in the meantime. So, if you have a way of extracting the music from the video, please feel free to do so and please send me a copy. The music is yours to listen to and distribute as long as you credit me for it.

Loosely following prompt 16: Severus's knowledge of ancient druid magic is germane to solving someone's problem. Whose problem? Harry's, Hermione's, Dobby's? You choose. What kind of problem? Illness, danger, Voldemort himself? Whatever problem you like, serious or funny. The Druid magic can be something he learned from a mentor, or original character. Or from a relative or found in an ancient tome that has lain untouched for centuries or any other plausible way you can imagine. Druid Magic can be an entire style of magic he has learned, or as small as a single spell or potion, or even a mere mention of a spell or potion that he must work out from incomplete information. No student relationship please.
